Reflection by Father Laurence Freeman

In the person of Jesus, we see this divine quality of self-emptying lived out in everything he says and does.

The attention is always off himself towards those he is healing, towards those he is teaching and ultimately, always towards his Father. He is not pointing to himself and saying, 'Look at me, elect me or treat me as your guru.'

He is constantly pointing away from himself and that is why we can trust and follow him. So this emptying that takes place in meditation is the work of attention. Because as we lay aside our thoughts and words and imagination, we are beginning and learning to pay attention to God without images, ideas or projection and something mysterious and marvellous happens as we enter into that experience, which is that the Word of God is born in us, the Eternal Word comes to birth in us and begins to transform us and to divinise us.

Quote

It's best to not confuse optimism with hope. Optimism is a psychological attitude toward life. Hope goes further. It is an anchor that one hurls toward the future, it's what lets you pull on the line and reach what you're aiming for.

Quotes

While sects accept only those who are fully observant and committed, the Church must keep a space open for spiritual seekers, for those who, while not fully identifying with it's teachings and practices, nevertheless feel some closeness to

Christianity. Jesus declared

“He who is not against us is with us” (Mk 9,40)

The Permanent task of the Church is mission. Mission in today's world cannot be 'Reconquista', an expression of nostalgia for a lost past, or proselytism, manipulation, an attempt to push seekers into the existing mental and institutional boundaries of the Church. Rather, these boundaries must be expanded and enriched precisely by the experiences of seekers.

Before his election to the See of Peter, Cardinal Bergoglio recalled the words of Scripture: Jesus stands at the door and knocks. But today, he added, Jesus knocks from within. He wants to go out and we must follow him. We need to go beyond our current mental and institutional boundaries, to go especially to the poor, the marginalised, the suffering.. The church is to be a field hospital- this idea of Pope Francis needs to be developed further.

A Word from Fr Jim

Archbishop Farrell set up the Building Hope initiative when he took office. He asked each parish to examine its mission under four headings.

Faith, Welcome, Social Justice and Servant Leadership.

From this was born Balally's mission of 'Building Hope' through meditation and Service.

The next stage of this process came when the Archbishop asked each parish to be part of a parish partnership. Each will discern how to work together going forward.

The three parishes he assigned to partner us are Dundrum, Ballinteer and Meadowbrook.

During the week we will host a gathering of the Parish Pastoral Councils of the four parishes.

We will keep you posted.

Some parishes in the diocese have experienced concerns regarding security.

We have been asked to take advice and make necessary changes

Having taken appropriate advice, the Parish Pastoral Council has agreed to change the locks on the Church.

A more detailed announcement will be made at Masses this weekend.

I wish you all the joys of Easter

With My Love & Blessing
Fr Jim
